Prerequisite with concurrency (course may be taken prior to this course or taken during the same term):
Brief Description for Bulletin
An examination of the history, literature, and theory of the theatre from prehistory to the present with an emphasis on theatrical space as a broad category for understanding a variety of issues and topics relevant to contemporary theatre practice. Areas of exploration include such topics as ritual landscapes as they pertain to the origin of drama, the development of the western playhouse, the avant-garde reconceptualization of theatre space, and the development of such spatially oriented American institutions such as Broadway and regional theatre.

Theatre 3720: Theatre History II

TR 8-9:15

Required Texts

Readings posted on Blackboard for download

Hugo, Victor. Hernani ---. Preface to
Cromwell Lillo, George. The London Merchant

Topics and Objectives: We will survey the history and literature of European and American theatre from the eighteenth century through the twentieth century, with a particular emphasis on body, text, and space as categories for understanding the development of Western theatre. The course will de-emphasize traditional chronology in favor of a topical and thematic approach to the subject. Within that topical and thematic framework we will discuss and write about a wide representation of plays, while tracing the development of genres, staging practices and theatrical conventions.

Teaching Methods: lecture and discussion.

Grading: Course outcomes include multiple choice/short answer exams, essays and exercises on class readings, play quizzes, class participation and final exam.

Midterm Exams (2) 20% Research Paper 25% Chapter Outlines/Misc. Assignments 20% Final Exam 25% Participation 10%
With the exception of the numeric Blackboard quizzes (see quiz policy below), grades in the course will be letter grades of A, A-, B+, B, B-, etc. Online quiz numeric scores translate as 5=A 4=B 3=D and a 0, 1 or 2= F. When I calculate final grades I use the following system:

A=4  A-  =3.8
B+=3.5
B=3  B-  =2.8
C+=2.5
C=2  C-  =1.8
D+=1.5
D=1

I average the grades in each area and calculate a course GPA by multiplying each area grade by its percentage and then adding all of those together to calculate a course GPA. For example, let’s say a student has the following grades:

Multiple Choice/Short Answer Average: C+  2.5 X .20=.5
Research Paper: A-  3.8 X .25=.95
Outlines/Miscellaneous Assignments: A  4 X .20=.8
Participation: B  3 X .1=.3
Final Exam: B+  3.5 X .25=.875

Class GPA Total 3.425 = final grade of B

Students are expected to complete all components of the course. Failure to turn in a research paper or to take a midterm or final will result in a failing grade.

Blackboard:

This course uses Blackboard, the university’s online course software system. Students must have access to a computer with Internet connectivity. Play quizzes, handouts and other materials will be available through Blackboard as will a record of each student's exam and quiz scores.

Research Paper:

Each student will be responsible for writing a 10-page research paper on any topic related to 20th century world theatre. This course covers European and American trends and practices through about 1950, but does not begin to cover the wide array of topics in 20th century theatre. I will distribute a list of possible topics (you may suggest one if you want to pursue a topic not on the list) that all relate to the modern theatre. The paper will be written in stages, with students submitting their work to me throughout the semester. A handout will follow early in the semester.

Old Syllabus
Play Quizzes:

We are reading a fair number of plays in this course and students are expected to read them thoroughly and to come to class prepared to contribute significantly to class discussion. The day before each discussion there will be a quiz posted on the Blackboard course “Assessments” page. These will be short answer quizzes designed to test whether or not you have read the play. Failure to take or pass these quizzes will, however, have a negative effect on your grade. Failure to take or pass three play quizzes means failure in the course. These quizzes are easy if you have read the play; extremely difficult if you have not. Should circumstances require it, the instructor may choose to administer play quizzes during class time. If so, the instructor will notify the class verbally or through email.

Chapter Outlines:

There are 3 extended reading assignments from Zarilli’s Theatre Histories. On the days that we discuss these readings in class (see calendar), students will bring an outline of the reading assignment. These outlines should identify the major topics covered in each reading as well as what you perceive the author’s point of view about the material to be. These should be thorough and substantive. It is not enough for you to read the material quickly and casually. Start your readings early enough to take careful notes. Your outlining will serve as part of your study guide for the multiple choice/short answer exams and the essay final at the end of the semester. Chapter outlines only apply to Theatre Histories: students are not required to outline the readings in Worthen or Krasner. Outlines should be submitted typed, not handwritten. There may be other more specific written assignments that pertain to the other readings. If so, these will be discussed and assigned in class.

Participation:

Participation means more than simply showing up for class. Students are expected to engage in class discussion and will not receive a passing participation grade unless they do so. Class discussion is not a time to be “right” or “wrong” and you will not be evaluated negatively because you may say something with which I or other students in the class may disagree. I want to see that you can think critically about the material and that you can articulate a point of view. Another factor in your participation grade is the extent to which you engage in any written assignment or exercise intended to foster class discussion (Bcards, miscellaneous response papers, etc.) No academic loitering!

Final Exam:

The final exam is a take-home essay. The exam will consist of two questions, one on the plays we have read this semester and the other on historical issues. The final exam will be structured to test your comprehension of all the material covered in the course, plays, lecture and videos, textbook and other course readings. Your final will be distributed on Thursday, April 24 and will be due in my box no later than 12:00 noon, May 1.
Attendance Policy:

Students are expected to attend all classes. Students who incur more than one unexcused absence will be dropped a full letter grade for every unexcused absence thereafter. The instructor determines the validity of any absence. Absences are excused for serious illness, serious family illness or death. Students participating in University athletics will be excused provided they submit their team schedule prior to missing class.

Medical excuses MUST include language that states the student was unable to attend class for a specific medical reason. Excuses that simply note a student’s presence at a medical clinic will not be accepted. Documentation must be submitted to the instructor no later than the next class day after your return to class. If the student does not submit his or her documentation by that deadline the absence will be unexcused. If the documentation is required for other classes, make a copy and give it to the instructor before the deadline. Showing the documentation to the instructor without providing a hard copy is not enough to excuse an absence.

You will Not be excused if:

1. you do not supply your documentation by the next class day after your return to class.
2. you do not bring the written documentation from your physician as stated above. An orange slip from the clinic with a date on it is not enough.
3. your medical appointment was not an emergency or could have been scheduled at another time. If you choose to schedule an appointment for a non-emergency physician’s visit during class time, you will incur an unexcused absence.

If you know you have an important personal event coming up, such as a wedding, family event, bar mitzvah, etc., please let me know in advance. It can most likely be excused if I know about it beforehand.

Spring Break begins after classes on Friday, March 13. If you decide to extend your break by making travel plans prior to the official start of the holiday and miss class as a result, you will incur an unexcused absence.

Class begins at 8:00 (yes, I know; it’s a drag for me too) and everyone is expected to be on time. Latecomers may be counted absent at the instructor’s discretion. Should personal problems, poor health, production schedules or other extenuating circumstances make it difficult to meet the attendance requirements of this class, it is your responsibility to drop the class and take it another time. I will not restructure the course to accommodate students who cannot be here.
Departmental Policy on Grade Notification:

Students who accrue a number of unexcused absences sufficient to merit failure in the course, or who fail to pass or take the requisite number of play quizzes, will receive a letter to that effect from the department chair. If this occurs prior to the mid-semester drop date, the student is advised to drop the course at that time. If the student incurs sufficient absences or quiz failures after the drop date, he or she will not be able to drop, but may consider the letter as official confirmation of the final grade. This is in accordance with a departmental policy adopted by the faculty last year.

Departmental Policy on Grades and Production Work:

Students who fail to achieve a ‘C’ or better in this or any other course in the major will be ineligible for production work during the following regular semester. The purpose of this “blacklist” is not to punish or shame, but to help such students focus on the most important aspect of their college careers—their coursework. Conversely, your instructor is happy to work with you in any way he can to make sure you succeed.

Unannounced Quiz Policy:

I reserve the right to administer unannounced quizzes on readings and lecture material. Should an unannounced quiz be given, it will factor into the other quizzes and will become part of your overall quiz grade. A failed unannounced quiz will be counted the same as failing a scheduled quiz. These don’t happen very often and in most semesters, nor do I like to grade them and you don’t like to take them, so just keep up in class and there will be no need for unannounced quizzes.

Make-Up Policy

As a rule, there are no make-ups for missed Blackboard quizzes or in-class exams. You are responsible for taking the Blackboard quizzes on the days and times they are available. If you are out of town on the day of a Blackboard quiz, plan to find a library or Internet café with a computer so you can take the quiz. Make-up quizzes and exams are administered very rarely and solely at the instructor’s discretion. What qualifies as an acceptable excuse for missing a quiz or exam?

Unacceptable Excuses: “My internet connection went down this morning;” “I had to go home this weekend and we don’t have a computer;” “I submitted the quiz, but Blackboard doesn’t indicate that I did.” “I overslept and missed class.”

Pretty Good Excuses: “I was hit by a truck and am in the hospital;” “I am in jail;” “I am dead.”

All make-up quizzes are essays written on a question provided by the instructor. They are to be submitted typed, double-spaced and free from spelling and grammatical errors. Make-ups for the multiple choice/short answer exams will be in the form of a research paper, 10 pages, fully sourced and footnoted, on a topic determined by the instructor. Students wishing to petition for a make-up must request it by the first day of their return to class. Again, I don’t particularly want to grade your research. paper or quiz essay any more than you want to write one, so please just show up for the exams and take the quizzes and you’ll be fine.

Old Syllabus
Access to Instructor and Email Policy:

I am happy to meet with any student to discuss any problem he or she may have. I am available during my posted office hours and by appointment. I am rarely available to see students on Mondays or Wednesdays, but can make appointments in the early afternoons on TR if need be. I try to review and respond to email at least every other day, but my response time to individual email inquiries will vary according to the urgency of the inquiry and the demands of my schedule in any given week.

Students with Disabilities:

Students needing accommodations should arrange a meeting the first week of class. Come during office hours or email for an alternate time. Bring the Accommodation Memo and Instructor Verification Form to the meeting. Discuss items needed in this class. If you do not have an Accommodation Memo but need special accommodations, make an appointment with The Program for Students with Disabilities, 1244 Haley Center, 844-2096 (V/TT) or email: haynemd@auburn.edu

Other Policies:

The Tiger Cub Manual lists many university policies that are relevant to this course (withdrawal dates, plagiarism and classroom behavior policies, etc.). Please familiarize yourselves with them by consulting the manual, which is available in PDF format on the university website. All such policies are in full effect with respect to this course.

Course Description:
We will examine the history and literature of European and American theatre from prehistory to the present with an emphasis on theatrical space as a broad category for understanding a variety of issues and topics relevant to contemporary theatre practice. Areas of exploration include such topics as ritual landscapes as they pertain to the origin of drama, the development of the western playhouse, the avant-garde re-conceptualization of theatrical space, and the development of such spatially oriented American institutions as Broadway and regional theatre.
Course Objectives:

- To acquaint students with a variety of theoretical perspectives and manifesto
- To critically explore a variety of dramatic literature from various periods of theatre history, both as blueprints for contemporary performance and as historical documents
- To familiarize students with scholarship in a specialized area of theatre history
- To help students draw connections between the theatrical past and contemporary practice

Teaching Methods: lecture, discussion and classroom exercises. This course is officially structured as lecture/studio class, which is why it meets 4 hours per week instead of three. Studio time is devoted to viewing films and to discussion of and exercises related to plays.

Grading: Course outcomes include short answer quizzes, essays, formal book research paper, play quizzes, in-class exercises and class participation.

Most of the grades in the course will be letter grades of A, A-, B+, B, B-, etc. The exception is the play quiz scores which on Blackboard will be numeric. Online quiz numeric scores translate as 5=A 4=B 3=D and a 0, 1 or 2= F. When I calculate final grades I use the following system:

A=4
A-=3.8
B+=3.5
B=3
B-=2.8
C+=2.5
C=2
C-=1.8
D+=1.5
D=1

I average the grades in each area and calculate a course GPA by multiplying each area grade by its percentage and then adding all of those together to calculate a course GPA. For example, let’s say a student has the following grades:

Short answer/essay midterm average: C+ 2.5 X .25=.625
Research paper: A- 3.8X25=.95
Play quizzes/outlines/participation: A 4X20=.8
Final Essay B+ 3.5X3=1.05

Class GPA Total 3.425 = final grade of B

Blackboard:

This course uses Blackboard, the university’s online course software system. Students must have access to a computer with Internet connectivity. Play quizzes, handouts and other materials will be available through Blackboard as will a record of each student’s exam and quiz scores.

Play Quizzes:

We are reading a good number of plays in this course and students are expected to read them thoroughly and to come to class prepared to contribute significantly to class discussion. The day before each discussion there will be a quiz posted on the Blackboard course “Assessments” page. These will be short answer quizzes designed to test whether or not you have read the play. Play quizzes (along with readings outlines and other class participation) will count for 20% of your final grade. Play quizzes will consist of five questions, with a minimum of three correct answers needed to pass. Failure to take or pass three or more of the play quizzes will result in a failing grade for the course. Occasionally, I may administer play quizzes in class, but if and when I do I will announce it in advance in class or through email.

Participation:

Participation means more than simply showing up for class. Students are expected to engage in class discussion and come prepared with any assigned work meant to facilitate that discussion (chapter outlines, response papers, and other exercises) and will not receive a passing participation grade unless they do so. I want to see that you can think critically about the material and that you can articulate a point of view. No academic loitering!

Research Paper:

Each student will be responsible for writing a 10-page research paper on a topic that applies any concept related to this course to any aspect of 20th or 21st century world theatre. This course does not, nor can it, begin to cover the wide array of topics in 20th and 21st century theatre. I will distribute a list of possible topics (you may suggest one if you want to pursue a topic not on the list) that all relate to the modern theatre. The paper will be written in stages (all of them mandatory for a passing grade on this component of the course) with students submitting their work to me throughout the semester for comment and assistance. A detailed handout will follow.
Midterms and Final Exam:

There are two short-answer midterms, an in-class midterm essay and a take-home essay final exam. The short answer midterms will test vocabulary and your ability to remember other “facts” pertinent to the course. The essays, in-class and take-home, will consist of questions on the plays we have read this semester as well as historical/theoretical issues, and students will be expected to develop their answers at some length and in doing so to demonstrate an ability to make connections between the “facts” and minutiae of theatre history (who, what, where, when) and the larger theoretical framework of the course.

Attendance Policy:

All excused absences require documentation (note from physician, etc.) Documentation is due no more than two days after the student’s return to class. Class begins at the published time and everyone is expected to be punctual. Latecomers may be counted absent at the instructor’s discretion. Students are subject to a drop of one letter grade for each unexcused absence. Should personal problems, poor health, production schedules or other extenuating circumstances make it difficult to meet the attendance requirements of this class, it is your responsibility to drop the class and take it another time. I will not restructure the course to accommodate students who cannot be here. Class is a priority. If you must make a non-emergency medical appointment, do so at a time other than 10:00-11:50 Mondays and Wednesdays. If you are making travel plans, please arrange them around class.

Unannounced Quiz Policy:

I reserve the right to administer unannounced quizzes on readings and lecture material. Should an unannounced quiz be given, it will factor into the other quizzes and will become part of your overall quiz grade. A failed unannounced quiz will be counted the same as failing a scheduled quiz. These don’t happen very often and in most semesters, not at all. I don’t like to grade them and you don’t like to take them, so just keep up in class and there will be no need for unannounced quizzes.

Make-Up Policy

As a rule, there are no make-ups for missed quizzes, either Blackboard or in-class. You are responsible for taking the Blackboard quizzes on the days and times they are available. If you are out of town on the day of a Blackboard quiz, plan to find a library or Internet café with a computer so you can take the quiz. Make-up quizzes and exams are administered very rarely and solely at the instructor's discretion. What qualifies as an acceptable excuse for missing a quiz or for failing to turn in a midterm or final on time?

Unacceptable Excuses: “My internet connection went down this morning;” “I had to go home this weekend and we don’t have a computer;” “I submitted the quiz, but Blackboard doesn’t indicate that I did.” “I overslept and missed class.”
Pretty Good Excuses: “I was hit by a truck and am in the hospital;” “I am in jail;” “I am dead.”

Should such an unlikely event occur, make up quizzes will be essays written on a question provided by the instructor. They are to be submitted typed, double-spaced and free from spelling and grammatical errors. Students wishing to petition for a make-up must request it by the first day of their return to class. Again, I don’t particularly want to grade your quiz essay any more than you want to write one, so please just take the quizzes and you’ll be fine.

Missed In-Class Work:

In-class work may consist of discussions, in-class exercises or other work done in small groups or with the class as a whole during regular class time. There really is no way to make up this component of the course, as it is by definition not done independently and alone but rather as a member of a group and as part of a group effort. If you are absent from class with a legitimate excuse you will not be subject to a drop in final letter grade (see absence policy above), but your participation grade is still dependent on your attendance and participation in class discussions and in-class exercises and may be affected accordingly.

Access to Instructor and Email Policy:

I am happy to meet with any student to discuss any problem he or she may have. I am available during my posted office hours and by appointment. I am rarely available to see students TR, but am generally available early in the afternoons on MW and F if need be. I try to review and respond to email at least every other day, but my response time to individual email inquiries will vary according to the urgency of the inquiry and the demands of my schedule in any given week.

Students with Disabilities:

Students needing accommodations should arrange a meeting the first week of class. Come during office hours or email for an alternate time. Bring the Accommodation Memo and Instructor Verification Form to the meeting. Discuss items needed in this class. If you do not have an Accommodation Memo but need special accommodations, make an appointment with The Program for Students with Disabilities, 1228 Haley Center, 844-2096 (V/TT) or email: haynemd@auburn.edu

Other Policies:

The Tiger Cub Manual lists many university policies that are relevant to this course (withdrawal dates, plagiarism and classroom behavior policies, etc.). Please familiarize yourselves with them by consulting the manual, which is available in PDF format on the university website. All such policies are in full effect with respect to this course.

Auburn University Department of Theatre Syllabus Appendix

Academic Honesty Policy: All portions of the Auburn University student academic honesty code (Title XII) found in the Tiger Cub will apply to this class. All academic honesty violations or alleged violations of the SGA Code of Laws will be reported to the Office of the Provost, which will then refer the case to the Academic Honesty Committee.
Office Hours: Faculty office hours are posted outside faculty offices on the second floor of the Telfair Peet Theatre. While students may visit faculty members at any time during their posted office hours, students are encouraged to make an appointment with individual faculty members to confirm a time when the faculty member can devote undivided attention to the student.

Emails: Faculty members in the Department of Theatre respond to student email as promptly as possible. Response time varies based on the size of the section of the course and the teaching load of an individual faculty member in any given term. Faculty members in the Department of Theatre are also regularly engaged in intensive research, creative work and outreach within and beyond the department each semester, and student consideration of faculty workload when measuring faculty response time to emails is greatly appreciated.

Late Submission of Written Work: Late work will be accepted in the case of excused absence at the next class session after the excused absence. Students who forget written work have a grace period of until 4:45 p.m. on the day the work is due to turn it in to the instructor’s office.

Missed In-Class Work Policy: It is the absent student’s responsibility to make arrangements for any make-up sessions.

Missed Examinations: Students with excused absences should make arrangements to make up missed quizzes and exams no later than the first class session after the excused absence.

Preparation: Students are reminded that all readings and written work are to be completed before the scheduled class session on the dates these assignments are due.

Unannounced Quizzes: Courses within the Department of Theatre often include unannounced quizzes. These quizzes are graded and included in the determination of a student’s final grade based on criteria devised by individual faculty members. The Department of Theatre affirms the right of individual faculty members to administer unannounced quizzes at any time during the semester they deem suitable. Students are therefore well advised to attend class regularly, and complete all readings, preparations, and assignments prior to the class discussion, studio, laboratory, or lecture session for which they are due.

Course Withdrawal: Students may withdraw from any course up until mid-semester with a “W” on their transcript.

Americans with Disabilities Act: Every Auburn University Theatre faculty member complies with the provisions of the Americans with Disabilities Act. Students needing accommodations should arrange a meeting the first week of class. Come during office hours or email for an alternate time. Bring the Accommodation Memo and Instructor Verification Form to the meeting. Discuss items needed in this class. If you do not have an Accommodation Memo but need special accommodations, make an appointment with The Program for Students with Disabilities, 1228 Haley Center, 844-2096 (V/TDD).
Final Examination Schedule: The final examination schedule for this semester may be accessed at:

http://www.auburn.edu/administration/Registrar/calendars/exam-schedule.html

Some courses within the Department of Theatre substitute performance tests, research projects, term papers, laboratory evaluations or other forms of evaluations suitable to the objectives of the course for a final exam. If so, your syllabus includes written information describing the method by which the final grade will be determined.

Justification

This submission is part of a proposed change to our theatre history and dramatic literature sequence (THEA 3700, Analysis of Dramatic Literature; 3710, Theatre History I; and THEA 3720, Theatre History II). Currently, 3700 is an elective and not a part of the theatre history cycle. We propose to join all three courses into a required cycle that will synthesize the study of dramatic literature, theatre history and performance theory, not chronologically, but topically. The new cycle will allow students to synthesize their study of the theatre by allowing them to make connections between the “facts” of history and those diachronic aesthetic and theoretical issues that have real impact on contemporary practice. The new cycle offers a master framework for each course—Text, Body, and Space—through which to consider a variety of historical, theoretical and critical issues. As such, we are changing the course names to Theatre History, Theory and Criticism I, II and III, with the emphasis on Text, Body and Space, respectively.

Rationale

Traditionally, undergraduate theatre history courses take a chronological and geographical approach to the subject. The emphasis is on memorization and mastery of facts, dates, and minutiae, an approach that assumes undergraduates already have a strong understanding of historical timelines and tracking. It is a positivist approach that leaves the successful student with an encyclopedic compendium of historical fact, but little sense of the relevance of those facts to practice or to the issues that concern the contemporary actor, designer or director. At Auburn, our two-course cycle, with its total of 90 hours of classroom instruction, could not possibly cover a chronological history of the European/American theatre (let alone significant aspects of non-Western theatre) in any way that could be considered comprehensive. Our current university model, with its long semesters and relatively brief instructional time, assumes that students can read large amounts of difficult material independently, that they can work independently on research papers and other complex academic assignments while using class time to understand the broad framework of the course material and to ask questions about the material that arise in the course of their relatively independent study. In other words, the classic university model views class time as a supplement to the independent efforts of the student outside of class.

Most university faculty would probably agree that those days (to the extent that they ever existed) are long gone. Our students often come to college ill-equipped to master the demands of college work and from high school programs that have not adequately prepared them for the level of rigor necessary for success. This means that more class time is needed to walk students through the process of research and writing, to do exercises that introduce them to methods of close reading, and to see (through film and video) examples of performance that we can no longer assume they will take the time to pursue on their own. Many of us find that, given the time and the right course structure and approach, many of our students can rise to the challenge and transcend their lack of adequate academic preparation.
So, we have two problems with the existing cycle: we need more class time for remediation and a new conceptual framework that allows a more holistic approach to the discipline. Toward that end, we propose the following changes.

Conceptual Framework

The study of the theatre, whether it be critical, historical or theoretical can be broken down onto three conceptual categories: Body, Space and Text. In order for a moment of theatre to occur, there must be an actor (a body), a place to perform (space), and something to perform (text—either written or improvised). These are not discrete categories that can be studied in complete isolation, but as one colleague at University of West Virginia who has also adopted this approach has said, a sequence based on these categories does “develop sensitivity within the topic,” and helps students to see the connections and interdependencies of each of these categories on the others. In our new sequence, issues of the “body” include the ecstatic and ritual origins of the theatre, shamanism and the mimetic hardwiring of our bodies that is evidenced across cultures, the rise and development of the profession of acting and the cultural prejudices and antitheatricalism that has historically focused on the perceived vices of the actor or the “protean” nature of the actor as a body in representation. Transvestism on the stage and the moral status of the actress, representations of gender and ethnicity, nudity, burlesque and transgressive acts, performance art and costuming practices are all grounded within this category.

Similarly, “space” most obviously deals with architecture and scenic practices, but also with ritual landscapes and the connections between ritualized space (the configuration of a church as the setting for a Mass, for example) and theatrical space (mansion and platea staging of the liturgical and vernacular dramas of the Middle Ages). The history of the avant-garde is one in which space is continually being redefined and the boundaries between audience and spectator constantly reexamined. Theatrical space is the ideal category for examining the American stage, with its emphasis on touring and the role of the railroad and combination show in the development of the American commercial theatre. The development of the director, which occurred largely as a response to growing technological sophistication of theatre spaces, is an appropriate topic to examine under this framework as well.

Much of the history of theatrical movements is tied to genre, and the “text” course will cover the major genres (tragedy, comedy, farce, satire, etc.) as well as the historical periods and movements within Western culture that impact those genres (Classical, Neoclassical, Romanticism, Naturalism, etc.). “Text” will also focus on the fundamentals of text analysis and close reading skills necessary for actors, designers and directors.

All three of these courses will have a significant dramatic literature component in which the selected plays reflect some aspect of the course’s master category. In the course on the body, for example, students may read Lysistrata and ‘Tis Pity She’s a Whore as part of a discussion on misogyny. Similarly, the course centered around space might include Corneille’s Theatrical Illusion to spur discussion on the limits of the neoclassical conception of space, or Henry V as an example of the cinematic imagination of the Elizabethan playwrights. Since the theatre history cycle bears the primary burden of exposing students to dramatic literature, the addition of the extra required course will ensure that students graduate having mastered a core reading list of 36-45 plays, from the current list of roughly 24.*

Credit Structure

Three 50-minute class periods per week is not sufficient instruction time to accomplish the goals of the new cycle. We therefore propose to change the THEA 3700, 3710 and 3720 to lecture/studio from the current lecture-only format. Courses will be offered on Mondays and Wednesdays for two combined 50-minute periods totaling 400 minutes of class per week. Studio time will be spent discussing play texts, and doing text analysis exercises, viewing films and video and other activities that will supplement what students are learning in the lecture portion of the course. We may, for example, after a lecture on the influence of the Dada movement on European theatre, create our own short version of a Dada play, or perhaps take some of the studio time to do a workshop on finding sources for research papers. We will mostly use it to discuss and dissect play texts or as an extended period to watch lengthy excerpts from performances or full-length videos. The lecture/studio option gives us the extra time we need to encourage in-depth discussion and to work on basic skills that students desperately need to achieve success in their academics and production work. While the sample syllabus does not break the lecture/studio time down the same way every week, we will structure the courses so that overall division is roughly 50-50, with students earning a full credit for each lecture hour and .5 of a credit for each studio hour for a total of 3 credits.

*This is in addition to other new courses we are adding to the curriculum which will require another 25-30 plays.
